

We would like to store data on "the cloud" and use the cloud's superior computing power to perform computations on data. What if we don't trust the cloud? Mathematicians and cryptographers have come together to give surprising solutions to the problem of how to compute on encrypted data.